

CALL FOR PAPERS: Application of Behavioral Economics in Asia

The American Committee on Asian Economic Studies solicits proposals for papers on the application of behavioral economics and behavioral finance in Asia. Four papers will be selected for the ACAES joint session with the American Economic Association at the Allied Social Science Association Annual Meetings to be held in Atlanta, Georgia, January 4-6, 2019. An expanded set of papers will be published as a special issue of the Journal of Asian Economics.

Economic behavior is shaped by public and private institutions, social organization, and cultural norms. We seek papers that take this into account to analyze economic behavior within the specific context of an Asian economy. Diverse analytical approaches are welcome, including the use of laboratory or field experiments, to characterize behavior and assess the role of institutions. Research oriented toward the design and implementation of public policy that is informed by a context sensitive understanding of economic behavior is encouraged.

The Journal of Asian Economics is the top ranking journal on Asian economic studies according to the RePEc 10-year simple impact factor. As of 2018, the Journal is included in the Social Sciences Citation Index. For Journal news, including posts of contents as new issues are published, please follow ACAES on Facebook.

ASSA proposal deadline: April 30, 2018

Submit proposals to: Calla Wiemer, calla.wiemer@acaes.us

Journal submissions will be accepted until November 30, 2018